

ABSTRACT

The invention consists of steel-bead weighted facial exercise weights designed in varying shapes, sizes, and weights. The weights are designed so that they are placed over the face providing resistance against the intended group of facial muscles to be developed. The method is designed for total facial muscle toning and development necessitating the use of varying sized, shapes, and weights that maximize the development of intended muscle group to be developed.